

R AND A

gothamist™
February 1, 2016

Gothamist Winter Guide: 20 Ways to Have a Fantastic February

By: Scott Heins

Courtesy Bronx Museum

Known for her finely-detailed and mystifying land art, Michelle Stuart will unveil Theatre of Memory, a new exhibition of photographs at the Bronx Museum this month. Patterns, weathered detail, and the earth's natural grit have long been integral parts of Stuart's work, and in a new series of still lifes shot specifically for the museum show, her inner world will be put on display for the world to see. You'll also get the chance to see works from Stuart's 1980s Codex series, which include squares of earth accompanied by photographs of the land from whence they came.

Opens Wednesday, February 3rd, 11 a.m. // The Bronx Museum, 1040 Grand Concourse, the Bronx // Free admission